FENSA installers get B&Q trade discount to help them with the credit crunch

FENSA is pleased to announce that it has formed a partnership with B&Q to provide trade discounts to FENSA Registered Businesses. This joint initiative forms part of FENSA's overall efforts aimed at enhancing its registration benefits to make life easier for companies by helping them to save money whilst maintaining quality.

The downturn in the economy requires business to trim operational costs without reducing the value of the products used. This partnership will see B&Q's trade discount card being co-branded with FENSA, to offer FENSA registered businesses a huge variety of cardholder benefits, which include monthly product discounts of up to 25%, plus additional volume discounts. FENSA registered businesses can opt to have their rebate cheques paid either in the business name or to installers privately

Director of Registered
Businesses, FENSA

All FENSA Registered Businesses will be issued with their personalised trade discount card for free. This co-branded trade discount card does not need to be activated and companies do not need to set up a trade account with B&Q. FENSA has already arranged on behalf of its registered businesses, to enable the card to be simply presented to B&Q's stores.

Jon Vanstone, Director of Registered Businesses, FENSA said 'We are very excited about this opportunity to bring B&Q trade discounts to all FENSA Registered Businesses. Since autumn 2008, FENSA has been running its Partner Programme, which brings money saving deals with companies that have been negotiated for FENSA registered businesses. This is made possible by FENSA utilising its volume purchasing power to negotiate the best deal based on its 9,000 plus registered businesses who together, undertake over 90% of replacement window installations in England and Wales.'

As Mike Cartwright Business to Business Manager at B&Q, commented 'We are continually looking to enhance the value of the B&Q brand, and to make B&Q's products and services more accessible to the wider trade audience. With both the B&Q and FENSA brands being highly recognised and demanded by both consumers and trade, teaming up with FENSA makes logical business sense for both parties.'
